

My name is John Williams. I'm proud to have called Wyoming home for over a half a century. I'm a proud American, fourth-generation family that's lived in Wyoming since the 1800s. I'd first like recognize all those fellow patriotic Americans who have worked safely in the fossil fuel industry, working long hours for their families and other fellow Americans to give the world products they need and use on a daily basis. Please stand if you're in the fossil fuel industry or a related field. (People stand in the audience.) Okay. I want to thank you. Give yourselves a hand. I really do. (Applause.) How many in this room own a electronic device? (Hands go up.) Okay. How long have you been figuring out those gadgets (inaudible) like an old guy like me? I get out-smarted by my smart phone all the time. How many people know where plastic comes from? (Hands go up.) Good. Well, let me share with you where plastic comes from. Although some plastics are made from renewable resources such as animal (inaudible), insects, trees. PETA is sure to love that. We all know PETA -- People Eating Tasty Animals; right? The fact is that a vast majority of plastics are made from fossil fuels. In fact, virtually everything in modern society uses fossil fuel even those government subsidized wind turbines and solar panels. So without fossil fuel, it's highly unlikely that everyone in this room would be able to afford an electronic device or much else for that matter. Fossil fuels have made billions of lives better for centuries, and a lot of our country (inaudible) the great nation it is. I would like to see a show of hands for fellow Americans who are against fossil fuels. Wow, nobody. Okay. Welcome to Wyoming. Hope you're treated well on your visit here. (Inaudible) you own that uses fossil fuel, that fossil fuels are used in, you might get a little warm in summer without your air conditioning or cold in the winter without heat. Walking to the convenience store instead of driving might not be so convenient, and living in the dark can get lonely. Another show of hands for those who are against fossil fuels that could live without any electronic device. Hmm, okay. The fact is these onerous rules and regulations are just an overreach of power in our country for personal gain by special interests and those politically connected to further control the people and business, the pathway to socialism. Bernie and Hillary are going to love that. To come back to air, water, climate change, gun control, et cetera, it's about control, government control of the people and business. We have a great document that begins with these three words, "We the people," that this nation was founded on, and it's the Constitution. It clearly states we the people are in charge of government, not the other way around. If you have not read the Constitution, you should. So I brought a copy for everybody who wants to read it. We need our government politicians and special interests to stop lining their pockets using the American people's hard-earned money for personal gain with their onerous regulations and subsidies to their political donors. Contact your politicians and let your voice be heard. If they ignore you, vote them out. Economic suicide from special interest regulations is not the answer. (Inaudible) can be sure of one thing our children, grandchildren, future generations will suffer miserably in the an economy devastated. It's not (inaudible) already on the path of no return. The song "Three Wooden Crosses" by Randy Travis: "It's not what you take when you leave this world behind you. It's what you leave behind you when you go." Do you care what you leave behind? God gave us these natural resources for a reason. Let us use them. There's a lot more room for fossil fuel created than it is now. We've had several climate change events since. So it's a natural cycle on earth. We've only had a few ice ages. Repeat after me, "We want coal." AUDIENCE: We want coal. MICROPHONE NUMBER ONE: We want oil. AUDIENCE: We want oil. MICROPHONE NUMBER ONE: There you go. I will vote. AUDIENCE: I will vote. MICROPHONE NUMBER ONE: We the people for our kids' future. AUDIENCE: We the people for our kids' future. MICROPHONE NUMBER ONE: Awesome. Thank you for coming, everybody.
